M Performance parts for G20 BMW 3 Series revealed

BMW has wasted no time in bringing out the M Performance parts catalogue for the new G20 BMW 3 Series, which made its debut at the 2018 Paris Motor Show yesterday. Munich says that the parts are directly inspired by and derived from motor racing, and they will allow customers to “systematically enhance the sports feel of their BMW 3 Series.”

The M Performance aerodynamic and exterior components comprises no fewer than 10 items, some available in a choice of matte black, gloss black or carbon fibre. These are the front splitter (or front splitter ‘pro’), rear spoiler and rear diffuser – they are claimed to optimise air stream while reducing uplift. On the side, you’ll find CF mirror caps and M Performance side sill films.

Below the tinted rear lights, you’ll find M Performance tailpipes, which feature high corrosion resistance and a long service life, thanks to their material mix of titanium and carbon fibre.

Moving on to wheels, which have four designs in two sizes. The 18-inch matte black double-spoke 796M wheels are suitable for use both in summer and winter. Upgrade to 20-inch, and the choice is between the forged cross-spoke 794 M bicolor wheels (jet black, burnished) and the forged Y-spoke 795 M wheels, in either bicolor (ferric grey matte, gloss lathed) or matte black. Now, BMW even provides M Performance tyre bags.

Wheels and brakes go together, and the M Performance 18-inch braking system is recognisable from the red four-piston aluminium calipers. Not just for looks, but the sports brakes also feature “considerably enhanced deceleration performance.” Compared to stock items, the 18-inch brake discs are bigger, perforated, grooved, and of lightweight construction. They also have higher thermal resistance.

Inside, the G20’s fresh new cabin can be decorated with an M Performance steering wheel, which has distinctive grip areas, large thumb rests, a red centre marking and silver-grey hand-sewn cross-stitch seams.
